Every genealogist soon learns that it is a waste of time to search early newspapers for obituary notices because so little material of this character was printed. A notable exception to this newspaper practice was the Massachusetts Centinel from 1784 to 1790, and the Columbian Centinel from 1790-1840. The editors of this paper made a particular effort to cull obituaries from all of their exchanges, with the result that they obtained fair national, and uniquely good regional coverage. Some 120,000 obituaries are alphabetically listed in this Index, which was compiled in 1941 under the supervision of the American Antiquarian Society, by W.P.A. workers.
